PART.008

SEASON 1, EPISODE 5-2: A BIG GATHERING WITH THE EGG FAMILY

On the eve of Christmas, Susie left her store shortly after 9 o'clock. The lights at Grandma Lucy's house had all been extinguished; it was evident that both Little Hunter and Grandma Lucy were fast asleep. Grandpa Ken, however, continued to keep an eye on the store. At times, Susie felt as if she were living by the sea, and her grandpa's quaint shop was akin to a cozy little lighthouse, casting its warm glow upon the entire town. The winter night was bitterly cold, so Susie wrapped herself in a thick scarf before heading home. After luxuriating in a warm, soothing bath, Susie nestled into bed.

As Susie lay there, her thoughts turned to Tanya, the visitor to her store earlier that day. A sense of delight washed over her, and she found herself eagerly anticipating her visit to the museum in the sky. The pressing question on her mind was whether this experience would come at no cost.

Having enjoyed a peaceful night's sleep, Susie awoke to the realization that it was finally Christmas morning.

She eagerly drew back the curtains, revealing a breathtaking winter wonderland outside. The pristine snowscape lay before her, an enchanting sight to behold.

Not too far away, Susie noticed a Santa Claus snowman, adorned with a bright red nose and a pink mask. She chuckled to herself, suspecting that it must be the handiwork of her young neighbor, Tom, likely fashioned from her mother's old rags.

With a smile on her face, Susie indulged in a hearty breakfast of pancakes, milk, and eggs, filling her with warmth and festive spirit.

Before embarking on her day, Susie had a thought – why not give Eggshell Lawyer a call? She pondered the possibility of arranging a meeting. With that in mind, she dialed the number and was met with the voice of a young lady on the other end. After inquiring about her situation, the girl informed her that it was Christmas Day, and as such, the law firm was closed for the holiday. She suggested that Susie visit them at 19 Ya Ale Court after the New Year's Day holiday, taking into account Susie's work schedule. Agreeing to this arrangement, Susie knew she would be heading to work on the following day.

Unexpectedly, the girl had a surprise in store—Tanya herself expressed a desire to speak with Susie. She called her and conveyed her pleasant surprise at her keen interest in the museum. Susie, on her part, expressed her eagerness to explore the museum, particularly since she was on the verge of becoming a mother. Although her knowledge of their philanthropic endeavors was limited, they had piqued her curiosity.

Tanya proposed a meeting during Susie's lunch break, an idea she found appealing. As the day unfolded at the tranquil breakfast shop, a few customers came and went. Noon soon arrived, and Susie indulged in a simple meal of bolognese noodles from the freezer.

Just after noon, Eggshell Lawyer made her entrance. To Susie's delight, she was attired in a colorful ensemble complete with a festive Christmas hat. With a playful tone, Susie complimented her on her charming attire.

In response, Tanya invited Susie to join her for lunch. Regrettably, she had already eaten, so they decided to enjoy a cup of coffee together. Her lunch consisted of a straightforward yet nutritious combination of snow peas, steamed salmon, potatoes, and carrots.

While sipping coffee, Tanya clarified that she was not there to provide instruction that day. Instead, her objective was to introduce Susie to the museum in the sky and address any concerns or doubts she might have.

In her characteristically candid manner, Susie smiled and acknowledged her reservations. She humorously voiced her concern about the possibility of them being involved in a child-selling scam, given their profession as lawyers. She pondered what the future might hold in such a scenario.

Tanya responded with a reassuring smile and requested that she retrieve a folder. She assured her that she understood her doubts and even provided her with the location of the Municipal Justice Bureau. There, she could verify that all lawyers, including herself, were duly registered. She even handed her her lawyer's license and shared the filing information for their law firm, emphasizing the importance of conducting one's due diligence, particularly regarding safety and legal matters.

Susie returned the smile, acknowledging her trust in her while reiterating her commitment to verifying the information for the sake of her children's well-being. She expressed her gratitude for her understanding and the information provided.

In a burst of festive cheer, Eggshell Lawyer playfully exclaimed, "Open the PARTY!" Recognizing that it was Christmas, she proposed celebrating with a party. She had already introduced Susie to the educators of Sky Kindergarten, each of whom donned colorful eggshell outfits.

As the lively video call unfolded, they humorously referred to themselves as the "Seven Cucurbit Brothers." In their spirited exchange, Susie met these educators, who introduced themselves and explained their roles.

The educators were a diverse group, offering various facets of early childhood education. Teacher M, an expert in child psychology from the UK, focused on building self-confidence in children. Teacher Q Egg aimed to nurture optimism and positivity in young minds.

Teacher X Egg, accompanied by his young son Little Golden Egg, guided children in discovering their life goals. Teacher R delved into the significance of money and its potential for positive change.

Teacher IY Egg, an experienced nurse, and Teacher IH Egg, a construction engineer, joined forces to impart lessons on health and well-being in creative ways.

Teacher T, or Tanya herself, highlighted the importance of safety education and legal knowledge in early childhood education. Each educator brought their unique perspective and passion to the table, fostering an atmosphere of excitement and hope.

Susie was captivated by the wealth of knowledge and opportunities the museum in the sky promised. She was inspired by their dedication to children's well-being and looked forward to embarking on this educational journey.
